Cop a hero for catching falling woman

A Boston police officer is being hailed as a hero for using his body to break the fall of a suicidal woman who jumped from a second-story window early yesterday morning.

Officer Robert Robichaud was the first on scene to the 3:45 a.m. call on Wilbert Road. When he arrived he saw the woman on the roof of a porch just outside the a second-story window. She was "very highly erratic" and had a bottle of liquor in between her legs.

"We plead with her over and over to you know go back in the house," he said.

Robichaud said officers were able to calm the woman down for a moment, right before she leaped from about 12 feet up.

"I don't know what happened," said the three-year veteran. "I looked up again. She just leaned forward and was falling at me head first."

Robichaud said he positioned himself under the woman, she landed on him and the two fell backward in to another officer.

Medical crews rushed over to treat them.

Robichaud, 31, said he strained his shoulder and bicep. The woman had no serious physical injuries and was being evaluated. METRO/MN

'Serial predator' faces more child porn charges

- Newton teacher also faces charges for allegedly abusing a young girl
- A coach is charged with enticing a teen boy to perform sex acts online

A former Newton teacher already in hot water for child pornography and sexual assault was arraigned yesterday on separate sex charges in connection with the alleged abuse of a young girl he was babysitting.

David Ettlinger, 34, of Brighton, pleaded not guilty in Middlesex Superior Court on charges of aggravated indecent assault and battery on a child under the age of 14, posing a child in a state of nudity, posting a child in sexual conduct, possession of child pornography and secretly recording a partially nude person, according to the Middlesex district attorney's office.

While searching Ettlinger's home in January, authorities found on his computer videos and images of Ettlinger sexually assaulting the girl, who he was hired to babysit. The girl was not one of his students, according to authorities.

Ettlinger was recently listed as a potential caregiver on the popular Sittercity.com website. It is unclear if the girl's parents were introduced to him through the site. Ettlinger was immediately removed from Sittercity.com and all parents who had contact with him were notified, according to a statement from the company.

Ettlinger has no previous record and in 2011 cleared a background check done by Newton schools.

The same computer helped investigators link Ettlinger to hundreds of child pornography files and images of him assaulting another girl, according to authorities. He was arraigned on those charges last month and held on bail.

Yesterday, Ettlinger was held on $50,000 cash bail and ordered to stay away from the victim and any other child under 16.

His attorney did not return a call to comment.

A Woburn Little League coach pleaded not guilty yesterday to charges he enticed a 13-year-old Arizona boy to perform sexual acts on Skype for him to watch.

Raymond McAllister, 20, of Woburn, was arraigned in Woburn District Court on charges of dissemination of matter harmful to a minor, enticement of a child, and posing or exhibiting a child in a state of nudity, according to the Middlesex district attorney's office. The art of raising awareness

Local lettering pro puts fancy signs in the hands of the homeless

Local artist Kenji Nakayama is trying to raise awareness about the homeless problem in Boston by using the stroke of his brush.

The traditional sign-painter and font aficionado has slowly been replacing homeless peoples' cardboard "help" signs with fancy, well-drawn ones and then blogging about it.

"I see the homeless everyday, and one day I thought maybe I will just make signs for them," said Nakayama, a Butera School of Arts alum.

Nakayama's Tumblr, "Signs for the Homeless," features photos of down-on-their-luck locals holding bright, eye-popping replacements instead of dilapidated cardboard scribbled with Sharpie (www.homelesssigns.tumblr.com).

As part of the project, Nakayama said he interacts with the individuals, interviews them and pays them $10 for their old sign. Then he gives them the handcrafted version in exchange.

Nakayama started the project in 2010, but said he's just getting it off the ground now and doesn't know where it will go. "I would like to see if it's really helping and if more people are paying attention," he said.

"There are many homeless people who haven't had a chance to get a job, or they are not fortunate enough to make a living like other people."

KENJI NAKAYAMA

He has only done three signs to date, but is contemplating getting other artists involved.

For those who balk at Nakayama's project, he said the idea isn't to exploit the people for the sake of art, but rather start a conversation.

"Maybe people will drive by and walk past and see the sign and start talking [more]," he said.

Boehner vows to block Obama contraceptive rule

House of Representatives Speaker John Boehner yesterday denounced President Barack Obama's new rule on contraceptives as an assault on "religious freedom" and vowed to stop it.

The controversy centers on a provision in the 2010 healthcare law that requires health insurance to cover basic birth control services for women - even at Catholic charities, hospitals and universities. Boehner said Obama should reverse the rule and Catholic bishops contend the policy infringes on religious liberty because the church does not condone birth control of any kind.

"This attack ... cannot stand and will not stand," Boehner, the top U.S. Republican in Congress, vowed in a speech on the floor of his chamber.

"This attack ... cannot stand and will not stand"

Press secretary Jay Carney said Obama will try to ease concerns of critics but intends to implement the rule to give women access to contraceptives.

Boehner said if the president refuses to rescind the measure, Congress will do so through the legislative process.

Boehner could face problems in the Senate, which is controlled by Democrats.

Is Santorum raining on the campaign parade?

Former Sen. Rick Santorum was the decisive winner on Tuesday night, coming from a widely presumed third place to sweep all three Republican contests — in Missouri, Minnesota and Colorado — as he took advantage of presumptive front-runner Mitt Romney's complacency and "I'm-not-Romney" rival Newt Gingrich's Gingrichness to whip his base into a vote-crushing froth.

Or was he?

One might expect a parade of positive headlines for Santorum the day following such an overwhelming rout, and indeed there were some such. Many campaign reports, however, painted the Santorum wins as further cementing Romney's chances of scoring the nomination even as they do damage to his sense of inevMittability. (Yeah, we went there.)

Confused? Read on.

For one, Romney backers point out that all three of Tuesday's contests were nonbinding. What this means practically is that delegates — whose votes the candidates need to secure in order to become their party's nominee — will not necessarily be awarded along voting lines. Though it can be expected that delegates will be roughly similar to vote tallies, no one knows for sure.

Perhaps more important, though, is how the Santorum sweeps throw a fat wrench in Gingrich's Anyone But Romney momentum. The former House speaker, who has been pushing hard to force this mantle upon himself, performed even worse than Romney on Tuesday, and that's saying a lot. Gingrich has now won one contest to Romney's three and Santorum's four. Romney wins so long as the not-Romney crowd continues to split that base.

▶ Can Rick Santorum catch up from behind?

TOM PENNINGTON/GETTY IMAGES

Of course, it would be a huge miscalculation to write off the message sent by these voters, that being a reaffirmation of one of the 2012 campaign's most puzzling truths: Despite his presumed victory, massive organization and perfect hair, many voters seem to really dislike Mitt Romney. A recent poll actually shows many voters saying they like him less the more they know him. And they'll only come to know him more in the coming months.

The challenge for conservatives will be to coalesce around a single opposition candidate before they end up knowing more than they can stomach.

Romney takes pen to history

The Romney campaign has allegedly altered a last-season campaign document to remove any positive mention of Rick Santorum. The 2008 press release, which once highlighted Santorum's background as well as his then-endorsement of Romney, has been neutered to minimize any previous good will between the two.

Karl Lagerfeld sorry for comments on Adele's weight

Karl Lagerfeld has his couture knickers in a bit of a twist about the media frenzy surrounding his recent comments about Adele's weight. When Lagerfeld served as the global guest editor of this newspaper on Tuesday, he was quoted as calling the singer "a little bit fat" in response to a question about singer Lana Del Rey. But now he's taking to the paper to reverse that statement. He told us, "I'd like to say to Adele that I am your biggest admirer. Sometimes when you take a sentence out of the article it changes the meaning of the thought. What I said was in relation to Lana Del Rey and the sentence has since been taken out of context from how it was originally published. I actually prefer Adele, she is my favorite singer and I am a great admirer of her. ... Adele is a beautiful girl. She is the best. And I can't wait for her next CD."

"I lost over 30 kilos over 10 years ago and have kept it off. I know how it feels when the press is mean to you in regards to your appearance."

An attorney for Russell Brand reportedly filed finalized divorce papers in Los Angeles this week, according to TMZ. And although Brand and Katy Perry reportedly did not sign a prenuptial agreement — meaning Brand could easily try to grab half of the fortune Perry earned during their 14-month marriage — sources say the British comedian has no intention of going after her money. Top of his game

At just 25, Wes Gordon is beyond his years in almost every way
A look at what's inspiring him

CHRISTOPHER GABELLO

See, Wes knows how to have fun.

Wes Gordon's career might give even the most accomplished person a complex. At only 25, the Central Saint Martins grad has worked under Tom Ford and Oscar de la Renta, garners rave reviews from editors and buyers for his successful namesake label, collaborated with Manolo Blahnik for his spring 2012 show, designed an upcoming capsule collection with Jones New York, and just nabbed the prestigious Fashion Group International Rising Star Award for his sophisticated designs and sharp tailoring. And yet, this go-getter insists he parties and watches reality TV like the rest of us ("'The Real Housewives of Atlanta' is my least favorite; 'Beverly Hills' is the best. It's over and I'm really upset.") To top it all off, this all-star Atlanta native is the perfect gentleman. We sat down with Gordon to talk street cred, Rooney Mara and his five-year plan — because, of course, he has one.

Congrats on the win. You're on everyone's one-to-watch list lately. How do you stay so poised?
Well, now I'm scared. I was fine until you said that. [Laughs] There's no time to think about anything except your to-do list. I'm rapidly getting gray hair.

For 25, your clothes have a mature sensibility to them. Have you always been more sophisticated than your peers?
I've always been an old soul. When I was in preschool, I used to insist on wearing suspenders and ties to school. I definitely have an aesthetic emerging.

And it's apparently going in a darker direction for fall. What influenced this?
Our collection this season is kind of Edwardian/"Dragon Tattoo" — like "Great Expectations" meets Rooney Mara, because we have a lot of interesting historical cuts, some great peplum shapes and long, floor-length coats. One of the nice things is that you get to design fall/winter collections when it's cold out. So for a lot of it you're walking around and it's chilly and you think, "What do you want to wear?" You want something a little darker, something mysterious. A high collar, long sleeves that go down to your knuckles, something with attitude and edge.

You're often called an uptown or society designer. But do you ever just want people to say you have street cred, too?

I live on Bowery and Bond. I'm totally a Downtowner. [Laughs] We [are sold in] Kirna Zabete, which is a supercool store in SoHo, and we have a diverse clientele. I'm just grateful to anyone who buys anything.

Jones New York wanted you to update their classic workwear line. How did you tackle that?
The idea was to take a little bit of what I do in terms of tailoring and cool materials, and to do a collection that addresses what the modern woman wants to wear.

So what's the five-year plan?
Growing the collection, we're going to do resorts and pre-fall, accessories and hopefully menswear, so that I can steal some clothes from the office. I want to do furniture, you name it — I want to do everything.

Truly, madly, deeply: Why do we get jealous?

THINKSTOCK.COM

▶ Suddenly, this guy just got a whole lot hotter.

Do you ever feel protective of your relationship — as if someone else is out to get your man (or woman)? You may be overly cautious. Or, you may just be reacting normally. "Mate poachers" exist. And Dr. David Buss, author of "The Dangerous Passion," says we've psychological adapted to defend ourselves against such threats.

First, is your partner your equal?: Determine his or her mate value: How desirable is this person on the mating market? Think about anything from looks to social status. When a couple pairs up, they tend to have approximately similar mating values, but discrepancies do develop over time.

"If one gets a big promotion at work, they could increase their mate value by virtue of the position. The lower mate value person tends to be most jealous as statistically, it's more likely the higher mate value person either having an affair or terminating the relationship," says Buss.

Then, identify the nature of the threat: According to Buss, men and women are equally jealous but differ in the nature of their emotion: "For a man, the sexual aspect of an infidelity poses a threat as it casts a doubt over their paternity certainty."

Furthermore, "men place a greater premium on physical attractiveness in potential mates, so when women see their man in a sexually charged interaction with a physically more attractive woman, that can drive a woman crazy." Online relationships and even the regular use of porn also trigger jealousy in a woman.

Take action: "Women enhance their physical appearance as a mate protection tactic whereas men redouble their efforts to fulfill their partners' desires," says Bass. On the flip side, "men are more physically reactive and more likely to commit crimes of passion than women," says Buss.

A symbol of love?

Seeing other people interested in your partner increases your perceptions of how desirable he or she is. "In this sense, jealousy can be healthy, especially in the early stages of a relationship. Women sometimes intentionally evoke jealousy in their partner to determine how committed and in love he is," he explains.

FIVE REASONS TO HIT THE MOVIES

MUST SEE:

▶ Denzel Washington is a man of intrigue in "Safe House."

JASIN BOLAND

1 'Safe House'
Denzel Washington heads up this tense thriller. He plays a highly skilled rebel CIA agent who, after being on the lam for 11 years, turns himself in without explanation. Ryan Reynolds co-stars as the rookie agent who's about to get schooled on the way his government really works.

2 'Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace'
Do you think you might like Jar Jar Binks a little more if you could see him in 3-D? George Lucas hopes so.

3 'The Vow'
Fingers crossed that quality actors Channing Tatum and Rachel McAdams will elevate this rom-com film about a woman who gets amnesia and can't remember who her husband is.

4 'Journey 2: The Mysterious Island'
The sequel to 2008's "Journey to the Center of the Earth" proposes that the places described in several sci-fi books were all the same island.

5 'The Woman in Black'
Daniel Radcliffe's first post-Potter appearance comes in this gothic tale of a 1800s British town terrorized by the ghost of a disturbed mother, hell-bent inspiring the local children to commit suicide.

Not hypocritical to play by the rules

RE: "HOW HYPOCRITCAL IS THE PRESIDENT?": President Obama is being called names — "hypocritical," "dancing with the devil," "brazenly cynical" and others — all because he has now bowed to and embraced the law passed by the U.S. Supreme Court in Citizens United versus FEC, giving the corporate giants the possibility of spending limitless amounts of money to lobby for or against any candidate they choose. Should Obama break the law passed by the Supreme Court? Won't he be tagged criminal by the righteous ones? JOHN DINGA, BROCKTON

In my opinion, Obama has not acted hypocritically with the decision to accept super PAC money. Poor guy. Leveling out the playing field is gonna be a little harder than he imagined. After all, he's playing with the mean kids now. WELINA FARAH, BOSTON

Companies want to keep our business

RE: "GOVERNMENT FUNDS GO BOTH WAYS": I hope Mr. Connell realizes that the "enemies ... domestic" are the very same politicians who have taken that oath. Devaluing a country's currency, bombing innocent people in foreign countries and taking away our liberties here at home are all serious criminal acts. Mr. Connell adores government roads and maintenance? I'm not impressed by the pothole-riddled streets we've got, or the constant-but-never-improving construction projects our cities so graciously allow us to pay for. As for poisoned food, I think Perdue chicken is more concerned with keeping its customers alive to become repeat customers than it is with impressing bureaucrats at the FDA. KELLY DONNOE, VIA E-MAIL

"We are all in charge of our own destiny, not some magic man in the sky."

I disagree with the people who complain that Obama isn't religious enough. I think he, as well as many other politicians, are out of touch with reality when they say they look to God for guidance. Which God is going to decide the outcome in the Middle East? Jehovah, Jesus, Allah or Santa Claus? We are all in charge of our own destiny, not some magic man in the sky. ROBERT LAROSA, VIA E-MAIL

So now Romney and Santorum are trying to outdo one another jamming their religious beliefs into the electoral process. They've forgotten why the Pilgrims came here in the first place: to get away from religious tyranny. PAUL SIMONS, VIA E-MAIL

Everything can't be unconstitutional!

RE: "PERHAPS IT IS TIME TO MAKE A CLEAN SWEEP IN WASHINGTON": Perhaps Mr. St. George can point to what passage in the Constitution foreign aid (most of which goes to Israel) violates? Or is this just another meaningless gripe against government using the "it's unconstitutional" canard? As for Rep. Paul: Going by his campaign platform, he isn't someone you'd ever want near the White House. JOSEPH CONNELL, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. It looks like one of your talents will get a workout at this juncture. You have a special aptitude for organizing things, and you will be asked to do so for others. Stay alert!

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. If you have a special talent that can be meaningful to others, use it posthaste. But make sure that you benefit from your gift as well.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Even though you'll be the one endowed with excellent leadership qualities, it will be others who recognize it before you do. Don't allow any self-doubts to dilute your talents.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Although your financial picture looks especially good, you may be slow to recognize it. This may be due to your using different methods, which will at first obscure your gains.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Because you'll enjoy your friends for who they are and not for what you can get from them, you'll be surprised when some pals shower you with favors. Ask not and you shall receive.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Don't hesitate to share your secret desires with friends you truly trust. True pals will want to help you figure out ways to fulfill your wishes, not make life harder on you.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. It behooves you to closely study the associates whom you admire. Chances are there is something of value you can learn from them.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. If you fail to get something you really want on your first try, push harder during a second attempt. Your probabilities for achieving what you want are good, as long as you don't give up.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Once you're able to view situations from other people's perspectives, you'll be more effective in dealing with both the situations and the people. Widen your outlook, widen your acceptance.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. You're in an unusually good earning cycle, which should increase your income stemming from special skills, knowledge and/or services you have to offer. Don't hesitate to ask for what you're worth.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Obligatory social activities with friends are likely to be more enjoyable than usual. It might be due to the fact that they will take place outside the house in inexpensive, fun venues.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Although it's usually unwise to attempt to do more than one thing at a time, this may not be true in your case. You can handle multiple tasks when there are dollars to be made.

The Fireplace turns up the heat for Valentine's Day and gets all Colonial-er than thou BOKX 109 and OM offer luscious treats too

You try not to listen in when sitting next to an arguing couple. But it's a different matter when it's John and Abigail Adams. During The Fireplace's (www.fireplacerest.com) two-weekend Valentine's celebration, "John & Abigail Love Letters" shows John Adams (Tom Macy) and wife Abigail (Pat Bridgman) recapturing the feisty flirtations of their courting years and the despair of the war years spent apart. Oh, the lost art of love letters. Hashtag that, tweeters.

The second Love Letters, on Saturday, swaps re-enactors for the Mass. Historical Society's exploration of the lovers' correspondence over Colonial era drinks — wow, Fishhouse Punch blends brandy, rum and peach juice. Reservations are recommended; these sell out as quickly as any V-Day reservations do. Speaking of which, The Fireplace is extending its special Valentine's menu — enjoy "Kissing Appetizers," a duet of oysters Rockefeller, jumbo grilled shrimp cocktail, butter-roasted clams to share — for several days.

Likewise, for five sexy, swanky nights, BOKX 109's three-course prix fixe menu offers such delights like scallop crudo with pomegranate, roasted half duck with a blackberry-brandy caramel and deconstructed white chocolate cake. The real icing on the cake is free parking right outside (www.newtonbokx.com).

OM's monthlong Valentine's finger-food prix fixe includes green curry moules frites, spare ribs in a lemongrass caramel sauce and a make-your-own tarts dessert platter. Sharon Van Etten may have a whole lot of prestigious special guests on her new album, but the collection still is very much in keeping with her unique sound

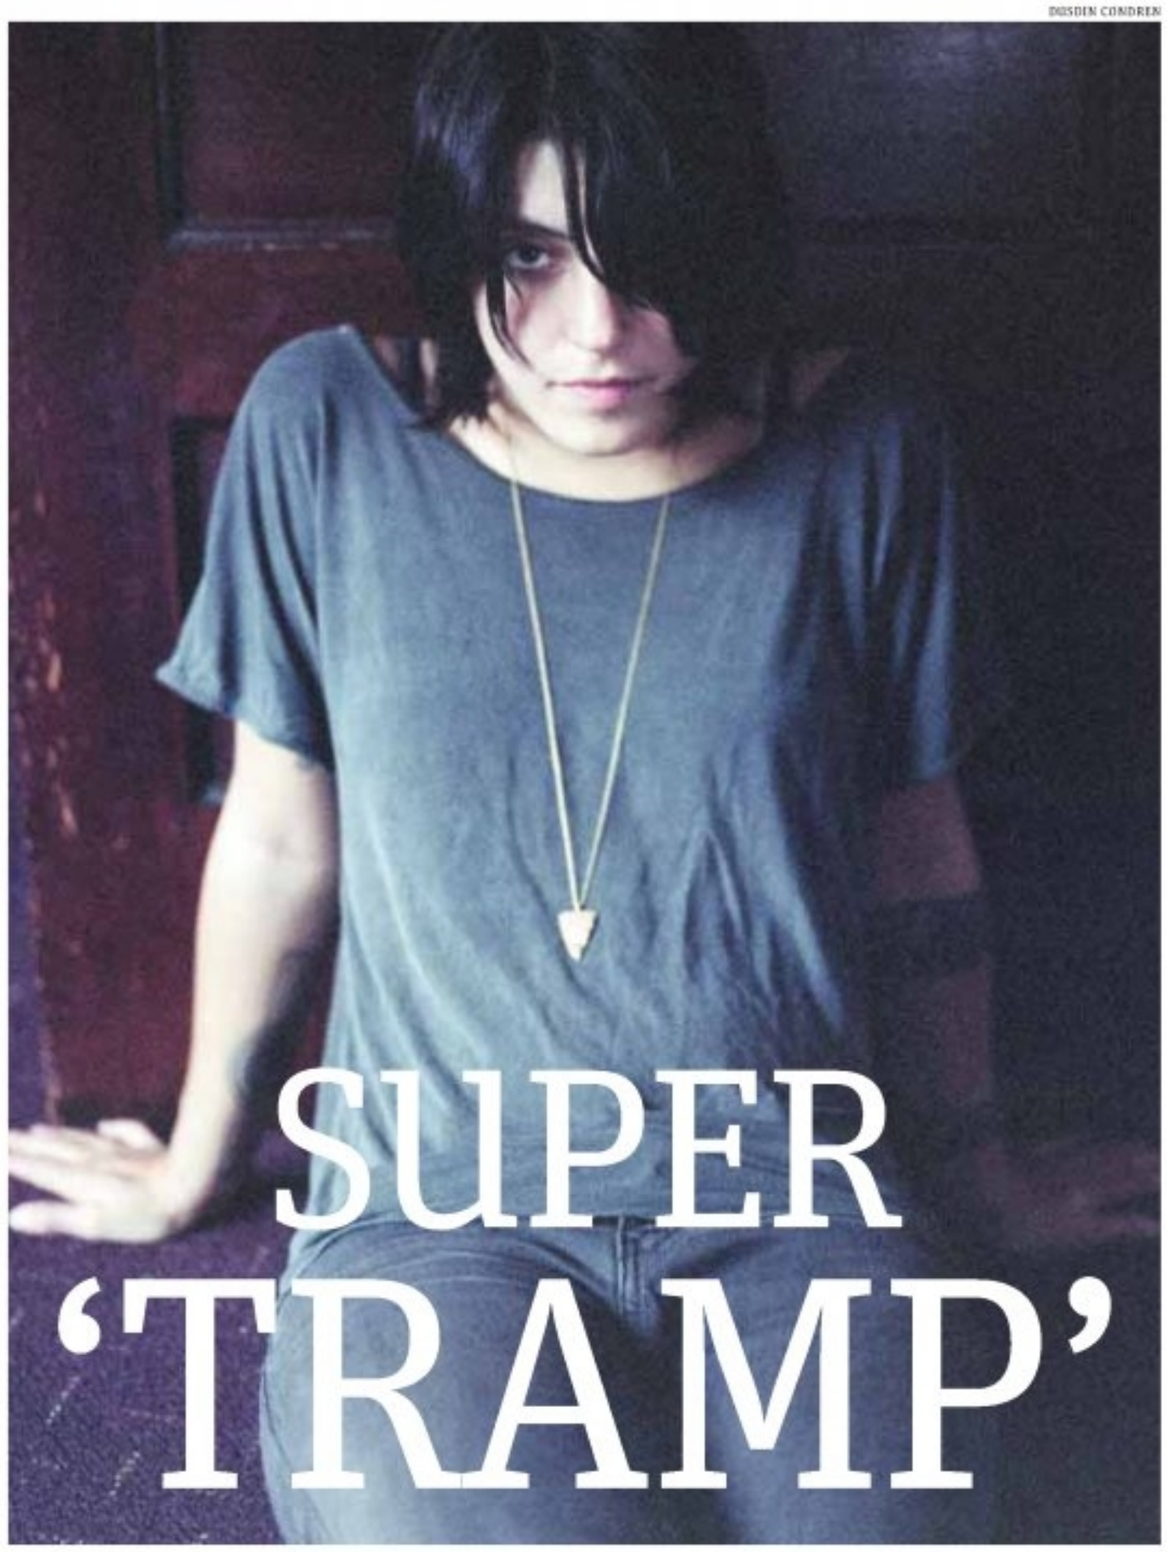
DUSDIN CONDREN



SUPER 'TRAMP'

Although the credits on Sharon Van Etten's new album read like the roster of an indie rock all-star game, at its heart, "Tramp" sounds exactly the way a Sharon Van Etten album should sound. Aaron Dressner of The National produced it; Matt Barrick of The Walkmen does most of the drumming; Zach Conden of Beirut, Jenn Wasner of Wye Oak and Julianna Barwick all provide integral vocal parts. While these contributors add their distinct imprints, they decorate rather than overshadow Van Etten's trademark combo of wistful words and hopeful melodies.

"Nobody wants to work on a record to hear themselves," says the singer. "I called on my friends because of their strengths, and we were very conscientious of not wanting to feature people that had a name. It was very much like, 'This is one of my favorite singers' and 'This is one of the best drummers.'"

Against this background Van Etten flourishes. Where previous recordings have felt like bedroom diaries, the songs on "Tramp" feel more like conversations. In fact, her collaboration with Zach Conden on the song, "We Are Fine," came about because of an important moment they shared.

"That song was funny because it was done, basically. We had it all recorded, but something didn't sit right with me," she says. "And I realized it was because it was meant to be a conversation. I wanted it to be with someone who knew what I was singing about, and the song is about talking somebody through having a panic attack. And that was one of the first bonding sessions I ever had with Zach. We both suffer from social anxiety."

Van Etten says the key to working with friends is balancing her own vision with her friends' input. In one instance Wasner envisioned her singing part as "grunts and growls."

"I was like, 'Hmmm,' because in my mind that was not what I was hearing," Van Etten laughs. "But I trusted her so much, and it made so much sense when she was doing it. When you're working with friends that get you, and they're really paying attention, all worry and insecurity subsides."

'Tramp'-like fuss

"I was looking for a title that was short, to the point, and strong," says Van Etten of her new album's name.

While working on the album, the singer was touring and between extended stays in Philadelphia, Brooklyn and New Jersey. Some of the song titles on "Tramp" that use people's names were dubbed as such because that's whose place she was subletting at the time she wrote them.

"I wanted it to have the feeling of transience, because I was moving around so much. But I also didn't want it to be a soft, sensitive word," she says. "There's the double-standard of when you call a man a tramp and it's kind of seen as endearing, and when you call a woman a tramp, there's a negative connotation to it, for some reason. And it's more of drawing attention to the word, and kind of owning it."

Clinton gets up for the down stroke.

George Clinton didn't invent funk (James Brown did), but his music exploded its potential, and he remains the style's supreme ambassador, laying it down with impunity at age 70. Maybe a daily dose of the funk is the key to longevity? While he's in town, Berklee will award Dr. Funkenstein an honorary doctorate, officiating his status as America's dean of funk studies.

So maybe Indy wasn't the perfect Super Bowl host after all. According to WISH-TV in Indianapolis, the Department of Health is investigating whether a person with measles visited the Super Bowl village last Friday. Since that time, two people have contracted the highly contagious disease.

Football, we miss you

The time of year where sports fans must rediscover themselves ◗ Stories that get play with no games

This is always the toughest week of the year if you're a sports fan.

Sure, today is not as dull as say, the day after the MLB All-Star Game (July 11 this year if you want to take a short vacation). But then again, that day is smack dab in the middle of summer, so who really cares?

This week, the annual dark period that suddenly deprives us of our national pastime (football), was particularly rough if you're a sports fan. As evidence, these are the three "big" sports stories that dominated the week:

Gisele speaks to fan

Sure, every red-blooded male would like to be acknowledged by the Brazilian supermodel. But an overambitious Giants fan got quite the response this week when he told Giselle, "Eli owns your husband."

Gisele responded with, "My husband cannot (expletive) throw the ball and catch the ball at the same time."

Brandon Jacobs tells Gisele to shut up

During the Giants Super Bowl victory celebration at MetLife Stadium Tuesday, the New York running back said about Gisele's comments:

"She just needs to continue to stay cute and shut up."

That's awesome and all, but, really, what is Jacobs doing here?

Is he defending Patriots receivers for some odd reason or is he simply making fun of another man's wife?

Gronk likes to grind

Former Pats safety Rodney Harrison said that Rob Gronkowski "disrespected himself" after the Patriots lost to the Giants on Sunday night by taking his shirt off and dancing at the team's postgame party Sunday night.

Look Rodney, we all deal with grief in different ways. Get over it. MATT BURKE

NFL News

Haley house

Todd Haley is known for getting the most out of his wideouts, using a ton of hurry-up and playing out of the shotgun plenty. Now he's in charge of the Steelers' offense. We can give Antonio Brown, Mike Wallace and Big Ben a boost.

BIG NAMES, SMALL GAMES

When the NBA announces its All-Star rosters tonight, fantasy owners will be cackling in a corner somewhere. Our All-Stars are a different breed.

Some superstars, like Kevin Durant and LeBron James, are at the top of the fantasy pile as well. But others are overrated — thanks to various holes in their games.

The free-throw issue

Blake Griffin, Dwight Howard, Andrew Bynum and Josh Smith are all tremendous assets to their respective squads. They also cause fantasy owners to be dead last in free-throw percentage every week. It's almost impossible to overcome that.

Past their prime

A wise man once said that Father Time is undefeated. But year after year, owners insist on over-rating players on the downside of their careers. Tim Duncan, Elton Brand, Jason Kidd, Paul Pierce and Dirk Nowitzki are former greats that are no longer worth the price tag. With the condensed schedule wreaking havoc, youth is being served. The old guys are missing games and playing less minutes.

The little things

An NBA star can get away with just scoring and rebounding or passing. A fantasy star can't. If players aren't going to block, steal or make 3-pointers then their value is capped. Tony Parker, Luis Scola and David Lee are very nice real-life players that can't hack it in the fantasy world.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Owning Dwight Howard's free-throw woes are a tough hurdle to overcome.

Top NBA Pickups

Nikola Pekovic

▶ C, Timberwolves
Pekovic has moved past Darko Milicic as the primary center thanks to rugged rebounding and soft touch.

Jeremy Lin

▶ PG, Knicks
Finally, a point guard that actually fits the Mike D'Antoni system. Baron Davis will never be truly healthy.

Randy Foye

▶ SG, Clippers
Chauncey Billups (Achilles) is done for the year. If Mo Williams is already owned, Foye is the next best thing.

16.4

Jeremy Lin averaged 16.4 points per game as a senior in college at Harvard. In his last two games for the Knicks he has averaged 26.5 points per game.

4.5

Lin also averaged 4.5 assists per game as a senior at Harvard. In the last two games playing for the Knicks he has averaged 7.5 assists per game.

Baseball speed

Getting cheap steals late in drafts is essential. Here are three guys to keep an eye on in spring training:

1 Cameron Maybin, OF, SD — Finally entering the season as a full-time player. Swiped 40 bags and was caught just eight times a year ago.

2 Dee Gordon, SS, LAD — We can get away with ignoring power at the shortstop position. Gordon had zero homers last year, but stole 24 bags in just 56 games.

3 Ben Revere, OF, MIN — Revere is going to have to battle for the starting left field job this spring. If he wins it, 40 steals is certainly within reach for the Twins outfielder.

Perk shreds LeBron and his tweet

Much was made about Clippers star Blake Griffin's highlight-reel dunk over former Celtics center Kendrick Perkins last week.

After the dunk, Miami's LeBron James tweeted, "Dunk of the Year! @blakegriffin just dunked on Kendrick Perkins so hard!!! Wow! I guess I'm No. 2 now. Move over No. 6."

Perk told Yahoo! Sports that he didn't appreciate LeBron's tweet.

"You don't see Kobe (Bryant) tweeting," Perkins said. "You don't see Michael Jordan tweeting. If you're an elite player, plays like that don't excite you." METRO/MB

▶ Kobe Bryant, center, and the rival Lakers visit TD Garden tonight (8 p.m., TNT) for the only time this season.

Lake Show invasion

Celts coming together as rival Lakers can't find their niche Rumors start to kick up around league regarding potential Gasol, Rondo swap

Three things to look for when the rival Lakers visit TD Garden for the lone time this season:

Employee No. 9

It's already been a wild season for Celtics point guard Rajon Rondo, and it doesn't look to be slowing down anytime soon. He was halfway out the door for Chris Paul before Paul was sent to the Clippers. Then, he fell down hard on his wrist, forcing him to miss games while still not being back to his normal self. Now, there are more rumors surfacing of a deal that would send him to the Lakers for Pau Gasol. I don't see it happening, but don't think that Rondo doesn't use all this trade talk as fuel to his fire. When he's on his game, he's one of the best point guards in the NBA, and he's known to show up for big games (and not so much for small games). This is obviously a big one, and Rondo should make a huge difference, injury or not.

'MVP! MVP!'

Those were the chants heard throughout TD Garden the season prior to Kevin Garnett, Ray Allen, and Banner 17. They were intended for Kobe Bryant. Safe to say that the moment was one of the low points in Boston Celtics fandom (and maybe was enough to set Celtics ownership over the top). Bryant went off for 43 points that night — including 7-for-9 from 3-point territory. The Lakers won. The C's beat them back in the Garden the next season, but since, the Lakers have taken the last three in Boston — two of which came by one point. Bryant hasn't scored 30 points in any of those games, but his teammates have stepped up to help. Expect this one to be close as the C's are playing great basketball right now. They should escape with the win at home.

Streaking C's

After a painfully slow start to their 2011-12 season the Celtics have pieced things together to get on a five-game win streak. The streak is the best current streak in the Eastern Conference.

At 14-10 on the year, the C's now seem to be on the right track. Boston's 87-56 win at home against Orlando on Jan. 23 and a 91-83 road win against the Magic three days later sparked the recent run.

Inside-outside game

Yes, Kevin Garnett can shoot threes. We've seen it happen a few times this season, but luckily Garnett isn't a guy who will hit one and chuck it up six more times in the same game. The Celtics need him down on the block. The truth is the C's need to man up in the paint tonight. The Lakers are the best rebounding team in the game and looking at their frontcourt of Gasol and Andrew Bynum, it's easy to see why. They're physical in the paint, and the biggest knock on the Celtics this season is the fact that their inside game is, statistically, one of the worst in the NBA. When they do create a presence down low, good things happen. They'll need it from Garnett, Chris Wilcox, and Jermaine O'Neal. The guards will also need to get down and dirty to win. Establishing a presence down low will open things up for the shooters on the C's, and create space on the offensive end.
